JAMESTOWN FESTIVAL

As the Virginia General Assembly ended its 1956 session by appropriating an additional $2,400,000, for the $23,000 Jamestown Festival of 1957, a ceremony in a Virginia shipyard figuratively "laid the keel" for next year's celebration of the nation's 350th birthday.

The ceremony at West Norfolk in reality laid the keel for the full-size replica of the historic 140-ton wooden vessel, Susan Constant, the flagship of the brave little fleet that brought the first successful colony of English-speaking people in America here to Jamestown in 1607.

Under the Union Jack of King James I and the flag of St. George's Cross, the huge oak timbers of the Susan Constant were lowered to the shipway, while Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, Supreme Allied Commander of naval forces in the Atlantic, spoke on the vessel's significance to the English - speaking world.

It was announced that contracts had been let to Dun's Marine Railway, Inc., builders of the Susan Constant, for the 40-ton Godspeed and the 20-ton pinnace Discovery. The original ships brought Captain John Smith and the 103 or 104 first permenent English settlers to America 13 years before Plymouth Rock.

All three replicas will be launched in December and will be moored in the James River off Jamestown Festival Park beginning in April, 1957. Visitors will be permitted to board the Susan Constant with its antique cannon and rigging, and see the cramped quarters in which the colonists made their five-month voyage.

Most of the new appropriation will go toward creating the Festival Park of 35 acres 1,000 yards from Jamestown where 2,500,000 visitors are expected. Work has already begun on the Park's full-size replica of log-palisaded James Fort of 1607, originally built to withstand Spanish or Indian attack.

ABBITT SEEKS CHANGE IN ALLOTMENT DEADLINE

The Tobacco Subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill which will provide a more realistic allotment of dark-fired and burley tobacco, Representative Watkins M. Abbitt said today.

Abbitt, who is chairman of the subcommittee, said the bill will be taken up by the full Agriculture Committee following the Easter recess and he hopes to obtain favorable House and Senate action shortly thereafter.

The Fourth District congressman introduced a bill February 22 calling for the change in the time for determining allotments and hearings were held last week.

The bill would change from December 1 to February 1 the deadline for the Secretary of Agriculture to announce quotas for dark-fired and burley tobacco. No change would be made in the December deadline for flue-cured tobacco, that crop is marketed earlier.

Abbitt said the present deadline is not late enough to give the Department a realistic appraisal of the crop, but the proposed change would allow enough time and appear to be "of real benefit to all concerned."

The congressman said that it has been proved by experience that December 1 deadline is too early and the result has been that the Department has either overestimated or underestimated the crop almost every year.

"I am hopeful that the new system will be accepted by the House and Senate in plenty of time to be used in determining the allotments next fall," Abbitt said.

NEW BOOK AT COUNTY LIBRARY

Marie Antionette, a novel by F. W. Kenyon.

Marie Antionette, last and loveliest Queen of France, now joins the gallery of glamorous women portrayed by F. W. Kenyon. When she came to the glittering court at Versailles, the dancing, golden-haired bride of the Dauphin who was to become Louis XVI, she was just fourteen years old. Throwing herself with fervor into the revelries and extravangances of the court, she set styles in fashion and hairdress, filled her days and nights with pleasure, and piled up over the years the mountainous debts that added fuel to the smoldering fires of the French Revolution. Amidst the horror and bloodshed of the Revolution, Marie Antionette attained full stature as woman and queen, spirited and courageous to the dramatic end.
